Edmonton, Alta., March 15 . . . L. D. Hickey, formerly assistant superintendent, Canadian Railways, Calgary division, who has been appointed superintendent at Prince Albert, will be succeeded by W. A. Stewart, of Montreal.

Mr. Stewart began his railway career as an office boy in the General Publicity Department in Montreal. After holding various positions in the publicity and operating departments he was, in 1913, loaned to the Trustees in secretarial capacity. Later he became private secretary and confidential assistant to the General manager of the Central Vermont Railway at St. Albans—a subsidiary of the Canadian National Railways—and in 1937, returned to Montreal as secretary to the vice president of operation, main tenance and construction of the National System from which post he goes to Calgary as assistant superintendent.

FAREWELL PARTY

A large number of district residents gathered in the Chinook Hotel Ballroom on the evening of Friday, March 26th, to bid farewell to Mrs. W. J. Gallagher, who is leaving this week to take up residence in Victoria.

The evening was spent in playing court whist and dancing. After the serving of a dainty lunch, Mr. D. L. Butts presented Mrs. Gallagher with a purse containing a sum of money from the people of Chinook.

Mrs. Gallagher has been in charge of the phone for a number of years, she was very obliging and it is very much regretted by all that she is leaving Chinook.

The party broke up at 3 o'clock, with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "She's A Jolly Good Fellow".

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lee were Calgary business visitors this week.

Local News

Mrs. Walter Gallagher and family left Wednesday night for Victoria, B. C. where she will in future reside.

Mrs. Geo. Anderson and little daughter of Victoria, who has been visiting with her parents and other relatives left last Saturday for Calgary, where she is spending a few days before returning to her home.

Mrs. E. H. Targett took the train for Calgary Monday night, where she met her son, Bryan who has been attending Preparatory Boys School in Vernon, B. C., who will spend a two week's vacation with his parents.

Cpl. Bill Youell of Edmonton spent the day on Tuesday in Chinook calling on his many friends.

Mr. W. Zawasky attended the C. N. Railway's Union meeting last week which was held at Alaskan.

Pte. L. E. Milligan is spending a few days this week at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Milligan.

To The Citizens of Chinook
Dear Friends:—

I received your parcel a while ago, and was pleased to get it. Also to know I wasn't forgotten, even a letter from our friends at home really is very welcome, it gives us new hope and cheer, as we think back and ponder for a moment, and realize how lucky you people are out there in dear old Canada, the land we love so much, and our love is not in vain.

Folks I wish to thank you from the bottom of my heart for your kind thoughts at home. I do hope that next Christmas we may all be together again and that the world is enjoying the freedom and peace that must be ours.

And for now I wish you all a very Happy and Prosperous New Year, and a brighter one than the past.

Yours as Always
Cpl. W. J. Gallagher

An Ounce of Prevention . . . 1 Prevent insect infestations by a thorough cleaning of your granary NOW. Insects often remain in empty bins. If bins are not cleaned the insects give a head start in your 1942 storage. It is the duty of every farmer to maintain his grain in the best possible condition. After the grain leaves the farmers' hands it is public property and insect infestations cause national losses.

The following measures are suggested as practical means of keeping grain stored in condition: 1. Brush down walls thoroughly. Clean all cracks and remove all grain debris. Sweeping the floor with damp sawdust will remove grain mites and small insects as no other method will do.

2. Sprinkle a small amount of hydrated lime over the entire floor and then carefully sweep to fill all cracks.

3. Where granaries have been infested in the past with grain mites or insects, clean the granary as outlined above and then give the entire inside a coat of whitewash containing one quarter of a pound of lye per gallon of solution (observe usual precautions to avoid lye burns). Allow to dry at least four warm days prior to binning grain.

4. Carefully examine bin after applying these measures and if live insects are still found an insecticide spray should be used. Information on these sprays may be obtained from the Grain Research Laboratory, Winnipeg, or the Division of Entomology, Ottawa.

5. Repair all leaks to prevent entry of moisture to grain. In some cases a complete lining of moisture proof paper will be necessary.

6. Provide all possible ventilation in your farm bin without allowing moisture to reach the grain.

7. Examine your grain frequently. If you find insects or mites take a sample to your elevator agent or send it to the Grain Research Laboratory, Winnipeg, or the Division of Entomology, Ottawa. Consulted by: H. E. Gray, Division of Entomology, Department of Agriculture, and Dr. J. N. Smealman, Grain Research Laboratory, Board of Grain Commissioners for Canada.

One Foodless Day

Does Not Bother Animals In The New York Zoo

War has brought not only less meat and substitute meats to animals in New York City's zoo, but it has also resulted in a "foodless day" each week.

Dr. Harry F. Nymphus, zoo dietitian, said the beasts adjusted themselves so quickly to "foodless Sundays" that they no longer look for the meat wagon.

Lions, for instance, now get horse meat instead of beef—and three pounds less per day than heretofore. Dr. Nymphus compounded a meat substitute chow consisting of carrots, beets, white bread, cod liver oil and a soup-cream of raw horse meat. "The animals thrive on it," he said. "They worry less, as a matter of fact," said Dr. Nymphus, "about the diminishing amount of red meat from their diets than do some other animals I know."

CHAPTER I

It was the Autumn of 1918, just at dusk and a man known as Smith—just John Smith, was strolling the grounds of the County Asylum at Melbridge, England.

His thoughts were rapid, kaleidoscopic and it bothered him that in speech he could only manage jerky, disjointed phrases. His eyes filled. It hurt not to be able to talk properly. Whispers of memory bothered his amnesia clouded mind. His last recollection went back only to the Autumn of 1917 when he had awakened in a German hospital . . . then been transferred to England as an exchange prisoner. Who was he? Where had he come from? The questions hung in space, unanswered.

A guard suddenly spoke out of the fog, pleasantly chided him for being out in such weather.

Smith said, "I'm all right. Coat's very warm. I like to walk . . . like to walk." His accomplishment of speech sent a warm glow over him. He walked on in the swirling mist with a shade more confidence.

Over in the town of Melbridge, the grimy factories had released their toilers for the evening and about now the pubs would be alive with discussion of the war. How soon would England beat the Huns? Could the war really be ended in 1918 as some predicted? Endlessly, the questions and answers would go the rounds again, not only in Melbridge—but all over England.

Smith, however, wasn't concerned with these queries. Always, his mind was occupied with but one thing . . . to piece beyond his mental nothingness . . . to learn the mystery of his blanked out past.

All at once, a siren screamed through the silence. It soared up and down in wild hurries. Another siren joined in, then several more. The noise mounted in a crazy delirium of sound. Smith was rooted to the ground with fear. There were sirens, bells and whistles. Then he heard voices calling to each other joyously. "The Armistice! It's peace! The war's over!"

It didn't all Smith with elation. Somehow, the news seemed unrelated to him. But suddenly he looked to the right, and there, in the open, he saw a man. The excitement they'd been left unguarded. Fearfully, he walked toward them. Then, without warning, he broke into a run. Not until he reached Melbridge, seething with celebrating humanity, did he slow down to a walk. Impulsively he stepped into a tobacconist's shop to ask for cigarettes.

Strange the sharp-eyed proprietress was taking quite a time about it. Suddenly, a low, musical voice said, "You're from the Asylum aren't you?"

Nervously, he swung around. A young girl with copper hair and brown eyes was watching him. She looked what was a pretty little actress in a third-rate touring company. Yet somehow, she was distinctive.

"Yes. Yes I am. But I'm all right . . . really . . ."

The girl nodded but now her voice was urgent. "Well, she's gone straight to the telephone. She's telling them to come for you. You'd better hurry along with me."

It was queer how quickly things happened after that . . . Smith at the Melbridge Arms pub, having a brandy and soda with this girl, Paula Ridgenway, being introduced to her friends then later hearing her look-alike at the theatre as she did her singing turn. There wasn't much to remember after that because he became feverish and chilled at the same time. He recalled Paula bending over him, looking so concerned. . . It was days later that he came to his senses again, to learn that he'd been quite ill with the flu. Then Paula told him wonderful news. She'd taken quite a fancy to him and wasn't going to let him be sent back to the Asylum. Instead, she was giving him a job travelling with them. Everything would be fine.

In the next day, Smith tried to absorb this miracle along with returning health. It was over. The dark days were gone. No longer would he be a strange, floating bit of driftwood on the stream of life. He was an individual now. He was a person.

A Beautiful, Exciting, Emotional
Story.

Towards the end of the show that night Paula ran in. "Oh," she beamed, "good boy. I see you're all packed. So am I. Our train leaves at one."

A sudden quail beset him. "Paula . . . you're sure I can be useful . . . that your manager isn't taking me on . . . just because you asked him to?"

She looked at this man who needed her so pitifully. Without warning he had stolen into her heart. He must be saved. He was too good a person to remain as debris of the war.

Bright tears stood in her eyes. "Good gracious Smithy you don't know Sam. He's hard as nails. No, you can take my word for it. He thinks you have something and the whole thing was his idea."

His smile flickered. "I can't tell you what it means Paula . . . to be someone again . . . to be wanted. It's all I'm doing."

He was sitting there in quiet contentment when she returned at twelve thirty. He started up eagerly. Then the grave expression of her face stopped him. "Nothing . . . wrong, is there?"

She sat down and her voice trembled. "I've got to talk to you Smithy." She steeled herself almost to curtness. "I won't beat about the bush. Sam won't take you now."

A man from the Asylum had come into the bar a while ago and told everyone about Smithy's escape. Sam knew now . . . he thought it was too risky taking him. "Smithy," she pleaded, "I think he's right. That returning fear in his eyes stabbed right through her. "Perhaps you should go back. You need care. You need doctors that understand your case . . ." Her voice trailed off. She had seen a dog look like that, a dog whose master had unexpectedly struck him.

Slowly, he nodded. He was humble and crushed again. The wide Asylum doors were swinging open and he must accept the decree that condemned him there.

She burst out, "Smithy, you're not angry with me? You don't think I've gone back on you?" His anguished eyes implored her not to torment him more. "Speak to me Smithy," she cried. "You could always speak to me." She clutched his hand but he pulled away and rose shakily to his feet.

In sudden decision she went to the door. Her voice was level, clear. "Wait for me Smithy." A short interval later she returned, her bags in her hands. "Come on Smithy. Get your coat on. We'll take the back stairs."

The pub below was dimly lighted and clouded with smoke. They crept past it stealthily. Smith was dazed, hardly knowing what he was doing or where he was going. But at least he was with Paula. A little later they were seated in a third class compartment of a train bound for the country, just beyond Melbridge. It was almost dawn when they reached Mrs. Deventer's rustic inn at Wickham. Paula had stopped there once with her father a long time ago and remembered the place fondly.

It was simple enough, explaining to the kindly Mrs. Deventer that Smithy was her fiance and that she had brought him here after a long illness, so that he might convalesce. And it was in the dawn of that lovely morning that they took up their new rural existence. Paula's meager savings would be enough to skim through on for a while. After that? Well, no need to worry now.

Willing To Help

People On Pitcairn Island Want To Aid War Effort

The 163 inhabitants of Pitcairn in the South Pacific—the tiny island whose romantic history was dramatically in the novel "Mutiny on the Bounty"—offered to shelter 35 bombed-out London children, colonial spokesmen disclosed.

When transportation problems made it impossible, the island then offered to aid the war effort by making walking sticks for wounded British soldiers.

The self-starter first appeared on automobiles in 1911.

An Oriental Fable

Told By China's First Lady It Has Good Moral

Mrs. Chiang told an anecdote full of rich Oriental flavor the other day in Washington. About 2,000 years ago, she said, there was a young Buddhist monk who sat cross-legged outside the temple, his hands clasped, chanting day after day, "Amita-Buddha," because he hoped that he would thus acquire grace. At length, the old Father Prior of the temple came up, seated himself beside the monk, and began rubbing a piece of brick against a stone. This, too, went on day after day.

At length, the acolyte could restrain his curiosity no longer, and asked the Prior what he was doing. "I am trying to make a mirror out of this brick," the old man replied. "But," said the monk, "it is impossible to make a mirror out of a brick, Father Prior." "Yes," replied the other, "and it is just as impossible for you to acquire grace by doing nothing except chant 'Amita-Buddha' all day long day in and day out."

The moral? There are several possibilities. But in the rich American idiom, it might be this: You can't win a war by sitting on your hands."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SELECTED RECIPES

CINNAMON ROLLS

1 cup basic sponge
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons butter (or lard)
2 1/2 cups sifted flour
Scald milk and dissolve sugar and salt in same. Cool. Mix with sponge—add melted butter or lard and flour to make soft dough. Let rise until double in bulk (about 1 1/2 hours). Knead again—turn on to board and roll out 1/2-inch thick. Spread with melted butter, and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Roll up like a jelly roll and cut off sections with sharp knife. Place these on end in greased pan and allow to rise till doubled in bulk. Wash tops with egg or milk and bake at 375 degrees F. about 20 minutes.
This makes one dozen large sized rolls.

THE RIGHT IDEA

Sensible reminder from Dr. Frank Kingdon to his fellow citizens of the U.S.A.: "It is unadmitted nonsense to think or talk of lendlease as though we were being generous to anybody. We are sending goods and supplies to our allies because they are fighting our battles." 2509

PERCENTAGE LOWER

What is no longer the king of crops on the western prairies. Recent figures issued by the Department of Agriculture show that the percentage of the cash income of the three Prairies Provinces represented by wheat had dropped in 1942 to 29.9 per cent, from from a high in 1926 of 72.1 per cent.

GREAT COOLERS

The engine oil coolers and super-charger intercoolers on a Flying Fortress cruising at 35,000 feet do a cooling job equivalent to that of 1,800 home-type refrigerators.
